WAT KO LAK (Prachuap Khiri Khan)

^{*} We recommend that you read the Notice at the end of this document before reading it in full.

"Lo these grey hairs" etc. This story the Master told while dwelling in Makhādeva's mango park, near Mithilā, about a smile. One day at eventide, the Master with a large company of Brethren was walking up and down in this mango park, when he espied a pleasant spot. Being desirous of telling his behavior in former times, he allowed a smile to be seen on his face. When asked by the Reverend Ānanda why he smiled, he answered, "In yonder spot, Ānanda, I once dwelt, deep in ecstatic meditation, in the time of King Makhādeva." Then at his request, he sat down upon an offered seat, and told a story of the past.

"Once upon a time, in the kingdom of Videha, and in the city of Mithilā, a certain Makhādeva was king. Four and eighty thousand years he took his pleasure as a young man, four and eighty thousand years he was viceroy, eighty and four thousand years he was king. Now he told his barber to be sure to inform him as soon as ever he should see grey hairs on his head. When by and by the barber saw grey hairs, and told him, he made the man pull them out with a pair of tongs, and to lay them upon his hand, and seeing death as it were clinging to his forehead, [96] "now," thinks he, "is the time for me to leave the world." So he gave the barber his choice of a village, and sending for his eldest son, he told him to undertake the government, since he was himself about to renounce the world. "Why, my lord?" asked he. The king replied:

"Lo these grey hairs that on my head appear Take of my life in passing year by year: They are God's messengers, which bring to mind The time I must renounce the world is near."

WAT MUANG (Ayutthaya)

With these words he made his son king with the ceremonial sprinkling, and leaving him directions to act thus and thus, he left the city; and embracing the life of a Brother, through eighty-four thousand years he fostered the Four Excellencies, and he was then reborn in Brahma's heaven. His son also, in like manner, renounced the world, and became destined to Brahma's heaven. So also his son again; and so one royal prince after another, to the number of eighty and four thousand less two each as he saw a white hair in his head became an ascetic in this mango park, and fostered the Four Excellencies, and was born in Brahma's heaven.

WAT DAOWADUENGSARAM (Bangkok)

Accordingly, he came from thence and was conceived in the womb of the king's consort in Mithilā city. On his name-day, the soothsayers looking at his marks, said, "Great king, this prince is born to round off your family. This your family of hermits will go no further." Hearing this, the king said, "The boy is born to round off my family like the hoop of a chariot-wheel!" So he gave him the name of Nemi-Kumāra, or Prince Hoop.

The first of all this line to be there born, King Makhādeva, standing in Brahma's heaven looked down upon the fortunes of his family, and was glad at heart to see that four and eighty thousand princes less two had renounced the world. He pondered: "Will there be nirvana now, or not?" Seeing that there would not, he resolved that he and no other must round off his family.

WAT DAOWADUENGSARAM (Bangkok)

From his childhood upwards, the boy was devoted to giving, to virtue, to keeping the Sabbath vow. Then his father, as usual, saw a white hair, gave a village to his barber, made his son king, became a hermit in the mango park, and was destined for Brahma's heaven. King Nimi, in his devotion to almsgiving, made five almshalls, one at each of the four gates of the city, and one in the midst of it, and [97] distributed great gifts: in each of the alms halls he distributed a hundred thousand pieces of money, that is five hundred thousand each day; continually he kept the Five Precepts; on the moon-days he observed the Sabbath; he encouraged the multitude in almsgiving and good works; he pointed out the road to heaven, and affrighted them with the fear of death, and preached the Law. They abiding by his admonitions, giving gifts and doing good, passed away one after another and were born in the world of gods: that world became full, hell was as it were empty. Then in the Heaven of the Thirty-three, the company of gods assembled in Sudhammā the divine hall of assembly, crying aloud; "Hail to our teacher, King Nimi! By his doing, by the knowledge of a Buddha, we have attained to this divine enjoyment infinite!" Thus they sang the virtues of the Great Being. Even in the world of men that sound of praise was spread, as oil spreads over the surface of the great deep.

WAT KHAO BANG KLANG (Prachuap Khiri Khan)

The Master explained this to the assembled Brethren in the following lines:

"It was a marvel in the world how good men did arise,

In the days of good King Nimi, the worthy and the wise,

Alms gave Videha's monarch, the conqueror of his foes;

And as he gave in charity, this thought in him arose:

'Which is more fruitful holy life or giving alms? who knows?'"

WAT KASEM SORANARAM (Samut Songkhram)

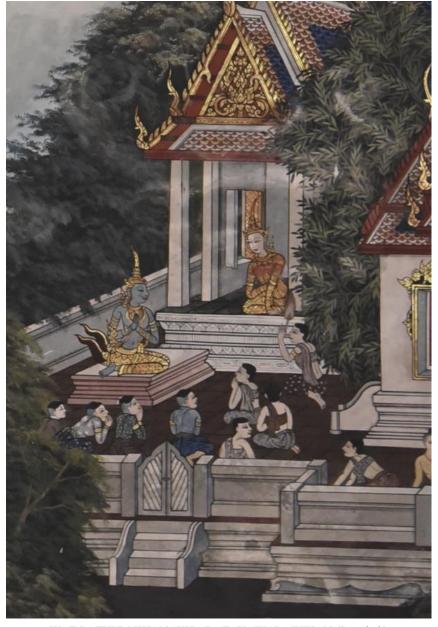

At that moment Sakka's throne became hot. Sakka pondering the reason saw him reflecting there. [98] "I will solve the question," he said; and going about, and swiftly, he made the palace one blaze of light, and entering the chamber, stood there glowing; and at the king's request, made all clear.

To explain this, the Master said:

"The mighty monarch of the gods, he of the thousand eyes, Perceives his thought; before his light away the darkness flies. Great Nimi spoke to Vāsava, and all his flesh did creep: 'Who art thou? Or a demigod or Sakka's self must be, For I have never seen or heard such glory as I see.' Then Vasava to Nimi spoke, knowing his flesh did creep: 'Sakka, the king of gods, I am; to visit you I'm here; Ask what you will, O king, and let your flesh not creep for fear.' Then Nimi spoke to Vāsava, this invitation made: 'Most puissant lord of all that breathe, this question solve for me: Holy to live, or alms to give, which should more fruitful be?' Then Vāsava to Nimi spoke, solving his question so, And told the fruit of holy life to him who did not know: 'He's born a Khattiya, who lives holy in the third degree: A god, the middle; and the first brings perfect purity.' Not easy are these states to win by any charity. Which hermits who have left the world win by austerity."

[99] By these verses he illustrated the great fruitfulness of a holy life, and then recited others, naming the kings who in times past had been unable to get beyond the domain of sense by giving great gifts:

"Dudīpa, Sāgara, Sela, Mucalinda, Bhagīrasa, Usīnara and Aṭṭhaka, Assaka, and Puthujjana, Yea, kings and Brahmins, Khattiya chiefs, many and many a one, For all their sacrifice, beyond the Peta world came none."

WAT PATHUM KHONGKHA RATCHAWORAWIHAN (Bangkok)

Having thus explained how much greater was the fruitfulness of holy life than that of almsgiving, he described those ascetics who by the holy life had passed the Peta world to be born in Brahma's heaven, and said:

"These holy hermits who had left the world, Seven sages, passed beyond: Yāmahanu, Somayāga, Manojava, Samudda, Māgha, and Bharata, and Kālikara: Four others: Kassapa, Aṅgīrasa, Akitti, Kisavaccha, these besides."

[100] So far, he described by tradition the great fruit of a holy life; but now he went on, declaring what he had himself seen:

"Sidā's a river in the north, unnavigable, deep:
About it, like a fire of reeds, blaze golden mountains steep,
With creepers filled and fragrant plants river and hills as well.
Thereby ten thousand eremites once on a time did dwell.
Noble am I, who kept the vow of temperance, self-control,
Almsgiving: solitary then tended each stedfast soul.
Caste or no caste, the upright man I would attend at need:
For every mortal man is bound by his own act and deed.
Apart from righteousness, all castes are sure to sink to hell:
All castes are purified if they are righteous and act well."

WAT BANG SAI NAI (Ayutthaya)

[102] After this, he said: "But, great king, although holy living is more fruitful by far than almsgiving, yet both these are the thoughts of great men: do you be watchful in both, give alms and follow virtue." With this advice, he went to his own place.

Then the company of gods said: "Sire, we have not seen you lately; where have you been?" "Sirs, a doubt arose in the mind of King Nimi at Mithilā, and I went to resolve the question, and to place him beyond doubt." And then he described the occurrence in verse:

"Listen to me, Sirs, one and all that here assembled be: Men who are righteous differ much in caste and quality. There is King Nimi, wise and good, the better part who chose King of Videha gave great gifts, that conqueror of his foes; And as these bounteous gifts he gave, behold this doubt arose: 'Which is more fruitful holy life or giving alms? Who knows?'"

WAT MONSANTAN (Lampang)

[103] So he spoke, without omission, telling the king's quality. This made the deities long to see that king; and they said, "Sire, King Nimi is our teacher; by following his admonitions, by his means, we have attained to the joy of godhood. We wish to see him, send for him, Sire, and show him to us!" Sakka consented, and sent Mātali: "Friend Mātali, yoke my royal car, go to Mithilā, place King Nimi in the divine chariot and bring him here." Mātali obeyed and departed. Whilst Sakka was talking with the gods, and giving his orders to Mātali, and sending his chariot, one month had passed by men's reckoning. So it was the holy day of the full moon: King Nimi opening the eastern window was sitting on the upper floor, surrounded by his courtiers, contemplating virtue; and just as the moon's disk raised in the east this chariot appeared. The people had eaten their evening meal, and sat at their doors talking comfortably together. "Why, there are two moons today!" they cried. As they gossiped, the chariot became plain to their view. "No, it is no moon," they said, "but a chariot!" In due course there appeared Mātali's team of a thousand thoroughbreds, and the car of Sakka, and they wondered whom that could be for?

WAT ARUN (Bangkok)

Ah, their king was righteous; for him Sakka's divine car must be sent; Sakka must wish to see their king. So in delight they cried out:

"A marvel in the world, to make one shiver with delight:

For glorious Videha comes the car divine in sight!"

WAT ARUN (Bangkok)

As the people talked and talked, swift as the wind came Mātali, who turned the chariot, and brought it to rest out of the way by the sill of the window, and called on the king to enter.

[104] Explaining this, the Master said:

"The mighty Mātali, the charioteer
Of heaven, summoned now Videha's king
Who lived in Mithilā: 'Come, noble king,
Lord of the world, upon this chariot mount;
Indra and all the gods, the Thirty-three,
Would see you, waiting in Sudhammā Hall.'"

The king thought, "I shall see the gods" dwelling-place, which I never have seen; and I shall be showing kindness to Mātali," so he addressed his women and all the people, and said; "In a short time I shall return: you must be watchful, do good and give alms." Then he got into the car.

The Master said, to explain this:

"Then with all speed, Videha's king arose,
And went towards the chariot, and got in.
When he was in it, Mātali thus spoke:
'By which road shall I take you, noble king?
Where dwell the wicked, or where dwell the good?'"

WAT BANG LUANG (Pathum Thani)

WAT KLANG BANG KAEO (Nakhon Pathom)

At this the king thought "I have never seen either of these places before, and I should like to see both." He answered:

"Mātali, charioteer divine, both places I would see

Both where the righteous men abide, and where the wicked be."

Mātali thinking, "One cannot see both at once; I will question him," recited a stanza:

"Which first, great monarch, noble king which place first would you see.

That where the righteous men abide, or where the wicked be!"

[105] Then the king, thinking that go to heaven he would in any case, and that he might as well choose to see hell, recited the next stanza

"I'd see the place of sinful men; please let me go to hell;

Where they who once did cruel deeds and where the wicked dwell."

Then he just showed him Vetaranī, the river of hell. To explain this, the Master said:

"Mātali showed the king Vetaranī, A river stinking, full of corrosive brine. Hot, covered all with burning flames of fire"

The king was terrified when he saw creatures thus sorely tormented in Vetaranī, and he asked Mātali what sins they had done. Mātali told him.

This the Master explained:

"Then Nimi, when he saw the people fall
In this deep river-flood, asked Mātali
[106['Fear comes on me to see it, charioteer:
Tell me, what is the sin these mortals did
Who are cast in the river?' He replied,
Describing how sin ripens and bears fruit:
'Who in the world of life are strong themselves,
Yet hurt the weak, oppress them, doing sin.
These cruel creatures begat sin, and they
Are cast into the stream Vetaranī.'"

WAT TAN JED CHOR (Ang Thong)

Thus did Mātali answer his question. And when the king had seen the hell Vetaranī, he caused this place to disappear, and driving the chariot onwards showed him the place where they are torn by dogs and other beasts. He answered the king's question as follows.

This the Master explained:

" 'Black dogs and speckled vultures, flocks of crows, Most horrid, prey upon them. When I look. Fear seizes on me. Tell me. Mātali. What sin have these committed, charioteer? Whom ravens prey on?' Mātali replied, Describing how sin ripens and bears fruit: 'These are the churls, the misers, foul of tongue To Brahmins and ascetics, that do hurt; These cruel creatures begat sin, and they Are those you see of ravens here the prey." [107] His other questions are answered in the same way. " 'Their bodies all ablaze they lie prostrate. Pounded with red-hot lumps: when I behold. Fear seizes on me. Tell me, Mātali, What sins have these committed, charioteer? Who lie there beaten with the red-hot lumps?' Then Mātali the charioteer replied, Describing how sin ripens and bears fruit: These in the world of life were sinful men. Who hurt and did torment those without sin. Both men and women, sinful as they were. These cruel creatures begat sin, and they Now he there beaten with the red-hot lumps.'

WAT DUSIDARAM WORAWIHAN (Bangkok)

'Others lie struggling in a pit of coals. Roaring, their bodies charred: when I behold, [108] Fear seizes on me: tell me, Mātali, What sin have these committed, charioteer. Who he there struggling in the fiery pit?' Then Mātali the charioteer replied. Describing how sin ripens and bears fruit: 'These are they who before a crowd of men Suborned a witness and forswore a debt; And thus destroying people, mighty king, These cruel creatures begat sin, and they Lie there now struggling in the pit of coals.' 'Blazing and flaming, all one mass of fire, I see an iron cauldron, huge and great: Fear comes upon me, as I look upon it. Mātali, tell me, charioteer divine What sin these mortals did, that here headfirst They're cast into the iron cauldron huge?' 'Then answered Mātali the charioteer. Describing how sin ripens and bears fruit: 'Whoso has hurt a Brahmin or ascetic. Foul men of sin, and he a virtuous man. Those cruel creatures begat sin, and they Now headlong fall into the iron bowl.'

WAT THA CHAD (Suphanburi)

[109] 'They wring them by the neck and cast them in.

Filling the cauldron full of boiling water!

Fear seizes on me: tell me, Mātali,

What sin has been committed by those mortals,

That with their heads all battered, there they lie?'

Then answered Mātali the charioteer,

Describing how sin ripens and bears fruit:

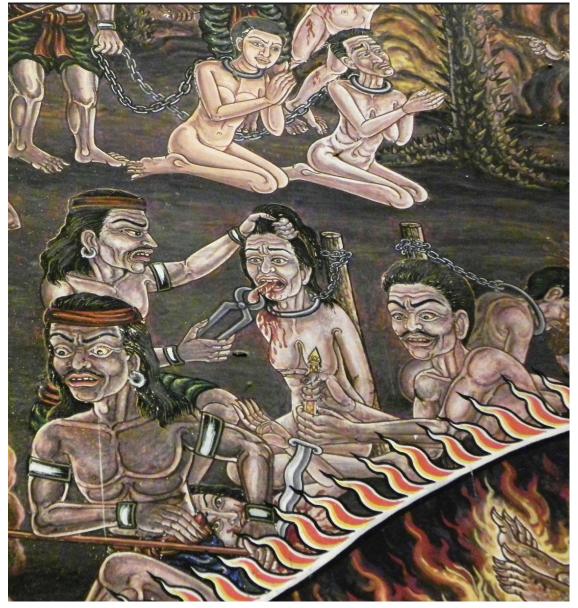

'These are the wicked men who in the world

Caught birds, and did destroy them, mighty king;

And thus, destroying other creatures, they

By these their cruel acts gave rise to sin.

And they lie yonder, with their own necks wrung.'

WAT CHAI MONGKOL (Angthong)

'With spikes and spears and arrowheads they pierce
Those loudly-wailing folk on either side:
Fear seizes on me: tell me, Mātali,
What sin has been committed by those mortals,
That they lie yonder riddled with the spears?'
Then answered Mātali the charioteer,
Describing how sin ripens and bears fruit:
'These in the world of life were wicked men
Who took what was not theirs, and lived upon it
Goats, sheep, kine, bulls, corn, treasure, silver, gold:
These cruel creatures begat sin, and they
Now yonder lie all riddled with the spears.'

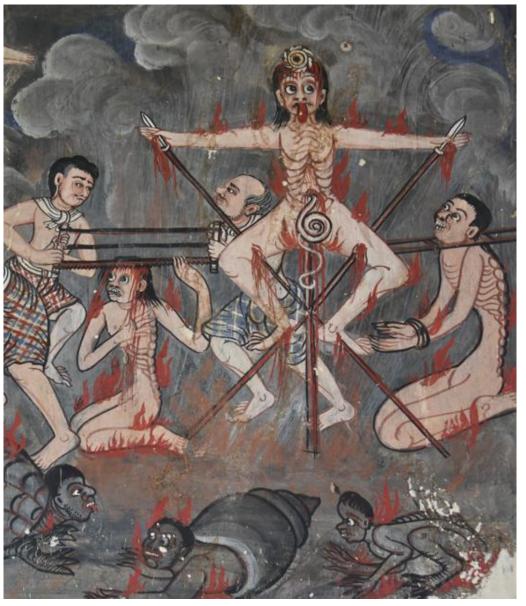

WAT YAI INTHARAM (Chomburi)

[111] 'Who are these fastened by the neck I see.
Some cut to pieces, others all to-torn:
Fear seizes on me: tell me, Mātali,
What sin has been committed by those mortals,
That they lie yonder torn in little bits?'
Then answered Mātali the charioteer,
Describing how sin ripens and bears fruit:
'Fishers and butchers, hunters of the boar,
Slayers of cattle, bulls, and goats, who slew
And laid the corpses in the slaughter-house,
These cruel creatures begat sin, and they
Are lying yonder torn in little bits?'

'Yon lake of filth and ordure, stinking foul.

With evil scent unclean, where starving men
Eat of the contents! This when I behold,
Fear seizes on me: tell me, Mātali,
What sin has been committed by those mortals.
Whom there I see devouring dirt and filth?'
Then answered Mātali the charioteer
Describing how sin ripens and bears fruit:
'These are malicious persons, who, for hurt
Of others, lived with them, and harmed their friends
[112] These cruel creatures begat sin, and now.
Poor fools, they have ordure and filth to eat.'

WAT MUANG (Ayutthaya)

'Yon lake is full of blood, and stinking foul.
With evil scent unclean, where scorcht with heat
Men drink the contents! Which when I behold,
Fear seizes on me; tell me, Mātali,
What sin has been committed by those mortals,
That they must now drink of the draught of blood?'
Then answered Mātali the charioteer,
Describing how sin ripens and bears fruit:
'They who have slain a mother or a father,
Whom they should reverence; excommunicate
These cruel creatures begat sin, and they
Are those who yonder drink the draught of blood.'

'That tongue see, pierced with a hook, like as a shield Stuck with a hundred barbs: and who are those [113] Who struggle leaping like a fish on land, And roaring, drabble spittle? When I see it. Fear seizes on me: tell me, Mātali, What sin has been committed by those mortals, Whom I see yonder swallowing the hook?' Then answered Mātali the charioteer. Describing how sin ripens and bears fruit: 'These men are they who in the market-place Haggling and cheapening from their greed of gain Have practised knavery, and thought it hidden, Like one that hooks a fish: but for the knave There is no safety, dogged by all his deeds: These cruel creatures begat sin, and they Are lying yonder swallowing the hook.'

WAT TAN JED CHOR (Ang Thong)

'Yon women, bent and broken, stretching their arms And wailing, wretched, smeared with stains of blood. Like cattle in the shambles, stand waist-deep Buried in earth, the upper trunk ablaze! [114] Fear seizes on me: tell me, Mātali, What sin has been committed by those women, That now they stand all buried in the earth Waist-deep, the upper trunk a mass of flame?' Then answered Mātali the charioteer. Describing how sin ripens and bears fruit: 'They were of noble birth when in the world, Lived lives unclean, did deeds of wickedness, Were traitors, left their husbands, and besides Did other things to satisfy their lust; They spent their lives in dalliance; therefore now Stand blazing, waist-deep buried in the earth.'

WAT SANGKRACHAI WORAWIHAN (Bangkok)

'Why do they seize yon persons by the legs
And cast them headlong into Naraka?
Fear seizes on me: tell me, Mātali,
[115] What sin has been committed by those men.
That they are so hurled headlong into Naraka?'
Then answered Mātali the charioteer.
Describing how sin ripens and bears fruit:
'These in the world did evil, did seduce
Another's wife, stole his most precious thing,
So now are headlong cast in Naraka.
They suffer misery for countless years
In hell; there is no safety for the sinner.
But he is ever dogged by his own deeds.
These cruel creatures begat sin, and they
Are now cast headlong into Naraka.'"

WAT THA LO (Phichit)

With these words, Mātali the charioteer made this hell to disappear also, and driving the chariot onwards, showed him the hell of torment for heretics. On request he explained it to him.

"'Many and various causes I have seen
Most terrible, amongst these hells: to see them
Fear seizes on me: tell me, Mātali,
What sin has been committed by those mortals.
Why they must suffer this excessive pain.
So sharp, so cruel, so intolerable?'
Then answered Mātali the charioteer.
Describing how sin ripens and bears fruit:
'Who in the world were wicked heretics.
Who put their faith in false delusion.
Made proselytes of others to their heresy,
[116] They by their heresy begetting sin
Must therefore suffer this excessive pain.
So sharp, so cruel, so intolerable.'"

WAT DO SALA (Phatthalung)

Now in heaven the gods were sitting in Sudhammā Hall, looking for the king's coming. "Mātali is a long time away," thought Sakka; and he perceived the reason, so he said, "Mātali is going the round as guide, showing all the different hells to the king and telling him what sin led to each hell." So calling to him a young god, very swift, he said to him. "Go tell Mātali to bring the king quickly hither. He is using up King Nimi's life; he must not go round all the hells." With speed the young god went and gave his message. When Mātali heard it, he said, "We must not delay". Then showing to the king at one flash all the great hells in the four quarters, he recited a stanza:

"Now, mighty monarch, thou hast seen the place Of sinners, and where cruel men are sent. And where the wicked go: now, royal sage. Come let us hasten to the king of heaven."

WAT DISANUGARAM (Bangkok)

WAT KAMPHANGBANGCHAK (Bangkok)

With this speech he turned the chariot towards heaven. As the king went towards heaven he beheld [117] in the air the mansion of a goddess, Bīraṇī, with pinnacles of jewels and gold, ornamented in great magnificence, having a park and a lake covered with lilies, and surrounded with trees worthy of the place: and there was this goddess seated upon a divan in a gabled chamber towards the front, and attended by a thousand nymphs, looking out through an open window. He asked Mātali who she was, and Mātali explained it to him.

"'Behold yon mansion with five pinnacles:
There, deckt with garlands, lies upon a couch
A most puissant woman, who assumes
All kinds of majesty and wondrous power.
Joy comes on me to see it, charioteer:
But tell me, Mātali, what her good deeds.
That she is happy in this heavenly mansion.'
Then answered Mātali the charioteer,
Describing how good ripens and bears fruit:
'Heard you ever in the world of Bīraṇī?
A Brahmin's home-born slave, who once received
A guest at the right moment, welcomed him
As mother might her son; and therefore now,
Generous and chaste, lives happy in this mansion.'"

[118] With these words, Mātali drove the chariot onwards and showed him the seven golden mansions of the god Soṇadinna. The other, when he saw these and the glory of the god, asked an explanation, which Mātali gave.

WAT MAKUT KASATRIYARAM RATCHAWORAWIHAN TEMPLE (Bangkok)

WAT THA CHAD (Suphanburi)

" 'There are seven mansions, shining clear and bright, Where dwells a mighty being, richly sight, Who with his wives inhabits them. Delight Moves me, to see it: tell me, Mātali, What is the good this mortal did, that he Dwells happy in this mansion heavenly?' Then answered Mātali the charioteer: Declaring how good ripens and bears fruit: 'This once was Sonadinna, one who gave With royal bounty, and for hermits wrought Seven hermitages: all their needs did crave He faithfully provided. Food he brought, Bedding to lie on, clothes to wear, and light. Contented with those men of life upright, He kept the Sabbath day, and each fortnight The eighth, the fourteenth and the fifteenth days; Generous, controlled, he walked in holy ways, So now dwells in this mansion of delight.'"

WAT MUANG (Singburi-2020)

WAT KHONGKHALAM (Ratchaburi)

WAT WASANA WARARAM (Lopburi)

[119] Thus he described the deeds of Sonadinna; then driving onwards his chariot, he showed a mansion of crystal: in height it was five and twenty leagues, it had hundreds of columns made of the seven precious things, hundreds of pinnacles, it was set about with lattices and little bells, a banner of gold and silver flew, beside it was a park and grove full of many bright flowers, with a lovely lake of lilies, nymphs cunning to sing and to make music were there in plenty. Then the king seeing this asked what were the deeds of these nymphs; and the other told him.

"'Yon mansion built of crystal, shining bright.

With pinnacles uplifted in the height,

With food and drink in plenty, and a throng

Of goodly women skilled in dance and song!

Joy seizes on me: tell me, Mātali,

What good these women did, that now in heaven

They dwell within this palace of delight?'

Then answered Mātali the charioteer:

Describing how good ripens and bears fruit:

'These women ever walked in holy ways,

Faithful lay sisters, kept the holy days,

Generous, controlled, and watchful, heart-serene,

Now happy in the mansion you have seen.'"

He drove the chariot on and showed a mansion of gems: it stood on a level spot, lofty, like a mountain of gems, bright shining, full of gods that played and sang divine music. Seeing this, the king asked what were the deeds of these gods, and the other replied.

WAT CHAI THIT (Bangkok)

[120] " 'Yon mansion built of jewels, shining bright, Symmetrical, proportioned, a fair sight. Where in divinest melody around. Songs, dances, drums and tabours do resound: I never have beheld a sight so fair. Nor sounds so sweet have ever heard, I swear! Joy seizes on me: tell me, Mātali, What good these mortals did, that now I see Happy in this heavenly mansion of delight?' Then answered Mātali the charioteer. Describing how good ripens and bears fruit: 'These were lay Brethren in the world of men: Provided parks and wells, or water drew In the well-shed, and tranquil saints did feed. Found clothes, food, drink and bedding, every need, Contented with these men of life upright, Who kept the Sabbath day, and each fortnight The eighth, the fourteenth and the fifteenth days; Generous, controlled, they walked in holy ways. And now dwell in this mansion of delight."

WAT PHRA PHUTTHABAT SARABURI (Saraburi)

WAT THA CHAD (Suphanburi)

Thus having described the deeds of these persons, he drove on and showed him another crystal mansion: with many a pinnacle, and all manner of flowers all about, and fine trees, echoing with the songs of birds of all kinds, by which flowed a river of pure water, [121] become the dwelling place of a virtuous person surrounded by a company of nymphs. Seeing this, the king asked what his deeds were; and the other told him.

" 'Yon mansion built of crystal, shining bright. Its pinnacles uplifted in the height With food and drink in plenty, and a throng Of goodly women skilled in dance and song, And rivers, fringed with many a flower and tree Joy seizes on me: tell me, Mātali, What good this mortal did in life, that he Rejoices in this mansion heavenly?' Then answered Mātali the charioteer. Describing how good ripens and bears fruit: 'At Kimbilā a householder was he. Bounteous, gave parks and wells, and faithfully Drew water, and the tranquil saints did feed. Found clothes, food, drink and bedding, every need, Contented with these men of life upright, He kept the Sabbath day, and each fortnight The eighth, the fourteenth and the fifteenth days; Generous, controlled, he walked in holy ways. And now dwells in this mansion of delight."

WAT BOT BON (Nonthaburi)

Thus he described the deeds of this man and drove on. Then he showed another crystal mansion: this even more than the last was grown about with all manner of fruit and flowers and clumps of trees. This seen, the king asked what were the deeds of this man who was so fortunate, and the other told him.

" 'Yon mansion, built of jewels, shining bright, Its pinnacles uplifted in the height. With food and drink in plenty, and a throng [122] Of goodly women skilled in dance and song. And rivers, fringed with many a tree and flower, Royal and elephant trees, and mango, sāl, Roseapple sweet, and tindook, piyal bower. And orchard-trees fruit-bearing one and all. Joy seizes on me: tell me, Mātali, What good this mortal did in life, that he Rejoices in this mansion heavenly?' Then answered Mātali the charioteer. Describing how good ripens and bears fruit: 'At Mithilā a householder was he. Bounteous, gave parks and wells, and faithfully Drew water, and the tranquil saints did feed. Found clothes, food, drink and bedding, all their need. Contented with these men of life upright. WAT PHO SRI (Singburi-2020)

WAT THA CHAD (Suphanburi)

Thus he described the deeds of this man also, and drove on. Then he showed another mansion of jewels, like the first, and at the king's request told him the deeds of a god who was happy there.

" 'Yon mansion built of jewels, shining bright, Symmetrical, proportioned, a fair sight. Where in divinest melody around. Songs, dances, drums and tabours do resound: I never have beheld a sight so fair, Nor sounds so sweet have ever heard. I swear! [123] Jov seizes on me: tell me, Mātali, What good these mortals did, whom now I see Happy in this heavenly mansion of delight?' Then answered Mātali the charioteer. Describing how good ripens and bears fruit: 'Once a Benares householder was he. Bounteous, gave parks and wells, and faithfully Drew water, and the tranquil saints did feed. Found clothes, food, drink and bedding, all their need, Contented with these men of life upright. He kept the Sabbath day, and each fortnight The eighth, the fourteenth and the fifteenth days; Generous, controlled, he walked in holy ways, And now dwells in this mansion of delight."

WAT PUTTHACHAK MONGKOL CHAYARAM (Bamgkok)

Again driving on, he showed a mansion of gold, like the sun in his strength, and at the king's request told him the deeds of the god who dwelt there.

" 'Behold you mansion made of flaming fire, Red like the sun whereas he riseth higher! Joy seizes on me: tell me, Mātali, What good this mortal did in life, that he Rejoices in this mansion heavenly?' Then answered Mātali the charioteer, Describing how good ripens and bears fruit: 'Once a Sāvatthi householder was he. Bounteous, gave parks and wells, and faithfully Drew water, and the tranquil saints did feed, Found clothes, food, drink and bedding, all their need, Contented with these men of life upright, He kept the Sabbath day, and each fortnight The eighth, the fourteenth and the fifteenth days; Generous, controlled, he walked in holy ways, And now dwells in this mansion of delight.'"

WAT TAN JED CHOR (Ang Thong)

WAT THA CHAD (Suphanburi)

[124] As he thus described these eight mansions, Sakka, king of the gods, thinking that Mātali was a long time in coming, sent another swift god with a message. Mātali, on hearing the message, saw that there must be no more delay; so at one flash he showed many mansions, and described to the king what were the deeds of those who dwelt in them.

"'See many fiery mansions in the air,
As in a bank of cloud the lightning's flare!
Joy seizes on me: tell me, Mātali,
What good these mortals did, whom now I see
Rejoicing in the heavenly mansion there?'
Then answered Mātali the charioteer
Describing how good ripens and bears fruit:
'Good-living, well-instructed, full of faith,
They acted as the Master's teaching saith;
By living as the Allwise Buddha told
They came to these abodes you now behold.'"

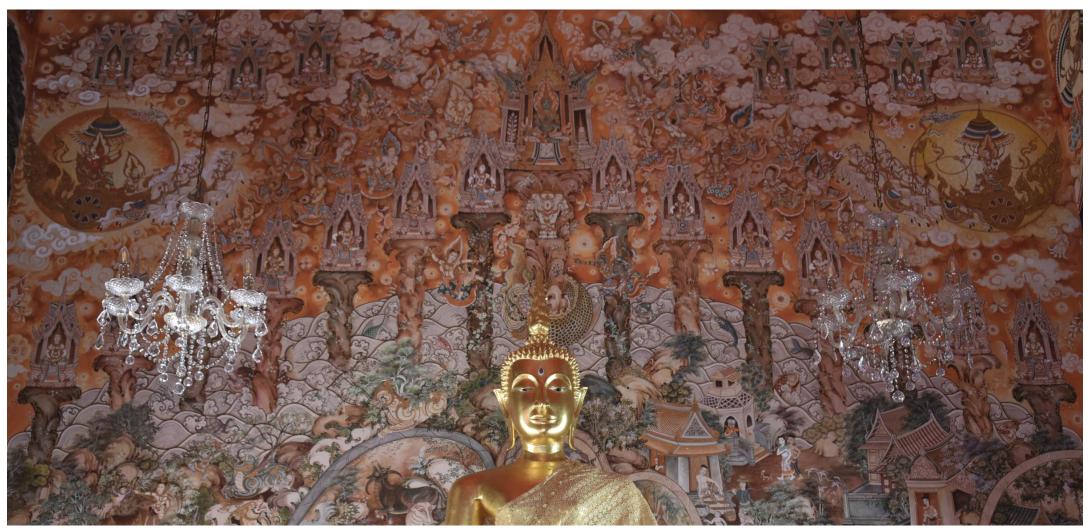

WAT CHANG KHONG (Chaing Mai)

Having thus shown him these mansions in the sky, he set out to come before Sakka with these words:

"Thou'st seen the places of the good and wicked in the air;

Unto the monarch of the gods come let us now repair."

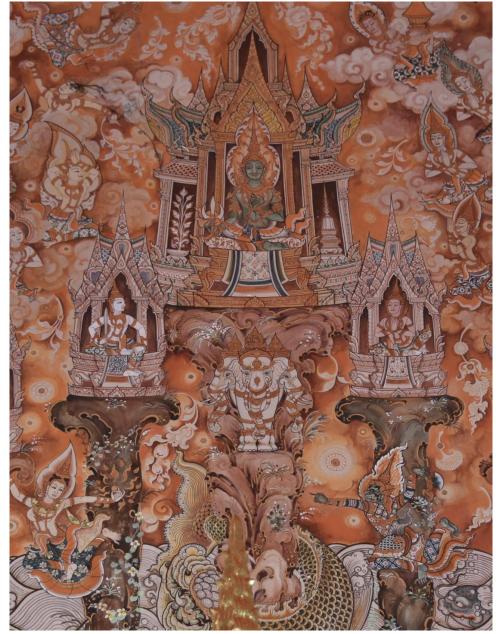

WAT SAM PASIEO (Suphanburi)

[125] With these words he drove on, and showed him the seven hills which make a ring about Sineru; to explain how the king questioned Mātali on seeing these, the Master said:

"As the king journeyed on his way in the celestial car Drawn by a thousand steeds, he saw the mountain peaks afar In Sīdā ocean, and he asked, 'Tell me what hills these are.'"

At this question of Nimi the god Mātali replied:

"The mighty hills Sudassara, Karavīka, Īsadhara, Yugandhara, Nemindhara, Vinataka, Assakaṇṇa. These hills are in Sīdantara, in order there they be, Which high-upstanding in the air thou, mighty king, dost see."

WAT SAM PASIEO (Suphanburi)

Thus he showed the Heaven of the Four Great Kings, and drove on until he could show the statues of Indra which stood around the great Cittakūţa gateway of the Heaven of the Thirty-three. At this sight the king asked, and the other answered.

" 'This place so fine, elaborate, adorned Set round with Indra's statues, as it were By tigers guarded [126] as I see this sight, Joy comes upon me: tell me, Mātali, What is the name of this that I behold?' Then answered Mātali the charioteer Describing how good ripens and bears fruit: 'This place is Cittakūta which you see. The entrance to the place of heaven's king. The doorway of the Mountain Beautiful: Elaborate, adorned, and set about With Indra's statues, as by tigers guarded. Enter, wise king! Enter this spotless place.'" With these words Mātali led the king within; so it is

"Journeying in the car celestial. Drawn by a thousand steeds, the mighty king Beheld the place where all the gods assemble."

WAT THUNG SI MUANG (Ubon Ratchathani)

And as he passed along, standing in the car still, he saw the place of the gods' assemblage in Sudhammā, and questioned Mātali, who replied.

" 'As in the autumn is the sky all blue, So is that jeweled mansion to the view. Joy comes upon me: tell me, Mātali, What is this mansion which I now behold?' Then answered Mātali the charioteer. Describing how good ripens and bears fruit: [127] 'This is Sudhammā, where the gods assemble. Supported by fair columns, finely wrought Eight-sided, made of gems and jewels rare, Where dwell the Three-and-thirty, with their chief. Lord Indra, thinking of the happiness Of gods and men: enter this lovely place, O mighty monarch, where the gods abide!" "

WAT KHOK HIRAN (Ayutthaya)

The gods on their part sat watching for his arrival; and when they heard that the king was come, they went out to meet him with divine flowers and perfumes as far as the great Cittakūṭa gateway; and presenting him with their flowers and perfumes they brought him to Sudhammā Hall. The king dismounting from the car entered the hall of the gods, and the gods offered him a seat, Sakka the like and all pleasures too.

Explaining this, the Master said:

"The gods beheld the king arrive: and then, their guest to greet, Cried 'Welcome, mighty monarch, whom we are so glad to meet!

O king! Beside the king of gods we pray you take a seat.'

And Sakka welcomed Vedeha, the king of Mithilā town.

Ay, Vāsava offered him all joys and prayed him to sit down.

'Amid the rulers of the world O welcome to our land:

Dwell with the gods, O king! Who have all wishes at command,

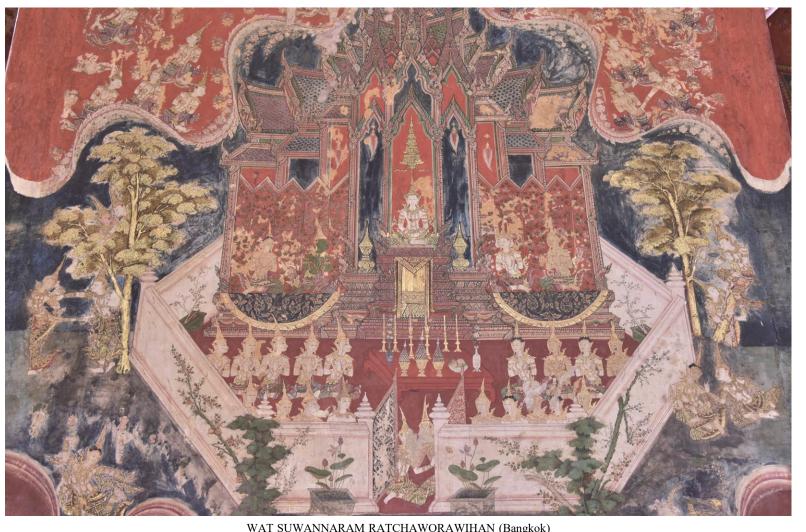

Enjoy immortal pleasures, where the Three-and-thirty stand.'"

Thus Sakka offered him celestial pleasures; and the king declining made answer:

"As when a chariot, or when goods are given on demand.
So is it to enjoy a bliss given by another's hand.
[128] I care not blessings to receive given by another's hand,
My goods are mine and mine alone when on my deeds I stand.
I'll go and do much good to men, give alms throughout the land.
Will follow virtue, exercise control and self-command:
He that so acts is happy, and fears no remorse at hand."

WAT KOH PRAYA JENG (Nonthaburi)

WAT SUWANNARAM RATCHAWORAWIHAN (Bangkok)

Thus did the Great Being discourse to the gods with honeyed sound; and discoursing he stayed seven days by men's reckoning, and gave delight to the company of the gods. And standing in the midst of the gods he described the virtue of Mātali:

"A most obliging personage is Mātali the charioteer, The places where the good abide and where the bad, he showed me clear." Then the king took leave of Sakka, saying that he wished to go to the world of men. Then Sakka said, "Friend Mātali, take King Nimi at once to Mithilā." He got ready the chariot; the king exchanged friendly greetings with the company of gods, left them and entered the car. Mātali drove the car eastwards to Mithilā. There the crowd, seeing the chariot, was delighted to know that their king was returning. Mātali passed round the city of Mithilā rightwise, and put down the Great Being at the same window, took leave, and returned to his own place.

WAT TALING CHAN (Sukhothai)

A great number of people surrounded the king and asked him what the gods' world was like. The king, describing the happiness of the gods and of Sakka their king, exhorted them to give alms and do good, for so they should be born in that divine place.

Afterwards, when his barber found a white hair and told him, he made the barber put aside that white hair; [129] then he gave a village to the barber, and desiring to renounce the world, made his son king in his place. So when asked why he wished to renounce the world, he recited the stanza, "Lo, these grey hairs"; and like the former kings he renounced the world, and dwelt in the same mango grove, developing the Four Excellencies, and became destined to Brahma's heaven.

It is his renouncing of the world which is described by the Master in the last stanza:

"Thus spake King Nimi, lord of Mithilā, And having made a mighty sacrifice, Entered upon the path of self-control."

And his son, named Kalāra-janaka, also renounced the world, and brought his line to an end.

WAT SAM PASIEO (Suphanburi)

When the Master had finished this discourse, he said: "So, Brethren, this is not the first time the Tathāgata left the world; he did the same before." Then he identified the Birth: "At that time, Anuruddha was Sakka, Ānanda was Mātali, the eighty-four kings were the Buddha's followers, and King Nimi was I myself."

* Notice:

During our last seven trips to Thailand, we discovered the incomparably rich mural paintings in Buddhist temples. Totally lost in the face of this superabundance of scenes and characters, we tried to understand what was being represented to us. Apart from a few evocations of city and country life, it soon became clear that the illustrations were either about the life of the historical Buddha, or about a set of narratives with pictorial characteristics found from one temple to another, and which turned out to be the last ten JATAKA (N°538 to 547), the last reincarnations of the Buddha. Reading Professor E.B. COWELL's immense (in every sense of the word) work was a revelation. Despite the fact that the text is reproduced in the illustrated document, we warmly recommend reading the original document, which is available on the excellent website: (https://archive.org/details/jatakaorstorieso06cowe/mode/1up).

Indeed, this document contains numerous footnotes which have not been included in our document.

Reading the text on its own, while very appealing in terms of content, can be tedious in some parts. That's why we thought it would be a good idea to include illustrations alongside the text, to illustrate the point and "lighten" the writing a little. These illustrations come exclusively from our 4K photo and video archives, taken from some 750 temples visited, 160 of which featured JATAKA paintings of varying degrees of development. The representation of these JATAKA is doubly inhomogeneous. From one JATAKA to another, their evocation is very uneven, with Vessantara N°547 being by far the most represented. On the other hand, within a given JATAKA, the most spectacular and popular scenes are often the only moments evoked in the story, to the detriment of those more esoteric yet decisive to the understanding of the subject. That's why, for certain parts of the text, we've included images that are not strictly related to the written content, but are simply illustrative evocations of the narrative. Conversely, as far as possible, we have tried to stick as closely as possible to the story told in the text.

The choice of illustrations is totally arbitrary in terms of both their artistic and historical qualities. We have tried to balance the choice between older and more recent paintings, both to pay homage to younger and older artists, and to avoid neglecting temples in remote provinces that are essential to the lives of the inhabitants of these regions. We hope to be of service to a few potential readers, and wish them happy reading.
